Sarah Segal-Lazar has been making music since before she could talk. Folks say she took her first steps in 3/4 time. By the time she was nine, she was sending songs into the local radio station.

At nineteen, she moved to the City That Never Sleeps. She started playing in dive bars in the Lower East Side and jazz bars in Greenwich Village.

Since crossing back over the 49th parallel, Sarah's gone onto release her own music, as well as compose for others. Her songs have been featured on CBC's As It Happens multiple times—one of Sarah's proudest moments.

These days, the Folk Femme Fatale splits her time between the busy streets of Montreal and the red shores of PEI—and shares her tunes wherever the wind may take her. Dancing at the crossroads where folk and country meet, her latest album VALLEYS, produced by Canadian folk luminary Matthew Barber, is out now. "Earlier", the feature single off the album, recently crossed the 15,000 stream mark on Spotify.
